Dear Commissioners,

I am wondering if the highway signs south of Hamilton and Florence, advocating that "masks save lives," are county property (tax-payer funded). If so, they should probably not be advertising a political agenda that is still causing intense controversy.

Perhaps "seat belts save lives" or "don't drink and drive" would be more appropriate and less inflammatory. Or, better yet, use the signs for road work and highway hazard messages, rather than general messaging or sharing propaganda.

Thank you,
