FROM TODAY'S WALL STREET JOURNAL

- “I don’t think it should be used at all,” said Dr. James Hildreth, president of Meharry Medical College in Nashville, Tenn., who as a member of an expert panel advising the Food and Drug Administration voted against authorization of molnupiravir.
- NOTE The was given emergency approval with fewer than 800 people being given Molnupiravir during the trials

Merck’s Covid-19 Pill Heavily Used So Far Despite Concerns

Doctors have turned to the drug, called molnupiravir, partly because a rival Pfizer pill has been in limited supply
