

If you only go to one more meeting this year...

this should be the one!

Doyel Shamley, CEO of Veritas Research is a specialist in applying the Constitution to inter-governmental coordination, jurisdiction, delegation of authority, land use and agency mitigation. He conducts research conferences around the country speaking to the public at symposiums, expositions and seminars about constitutional issues, land management, inter-governmental and jurisdictional affairs.

Doyel led a major change in how his county interfaces with the federal government, specifically the U.S. Forest Service. This new methodology is a way forward for not only Nevada County, but all counties that have federal land holdings within their county jurisdictions.

This event is being sponsored by Shoshone County and the Idaho State Snowmobile Association. There is no cost for admission.

This is a six hour seminar for county commissioners, elected officials and anyone interested in how to better interface with the federal government. The methodology taught is based on solid constitutional principles and can provide a way forward for all counties that have federal land holdings within their county jurisdictions.
