Subject: Proposed relaxation of floodplain restrictions

Please don't let this happen. New map or no new map, rivers are unpredictable at best, and new construction in the floodplain could be catastrophic during a flood stage. Do you really want to create perils of this nature for new homeowners? Do you want to trigger more FEMA spending (our taxpayer money) in the event of a flood where the river takes over new territory?

It's a very bad idea, and I think the majority of Bitterrooters would agree with me.
