Please join us for the 2018 Montana Water Summit

March 6-7 in Helena

Water is a critical resource for all Montanans - and it's limited.

The Montana Water Summit will explore pressures on the state's water supply and water quality from growth, development, and climate change. The goal is to foster a state level, multidisciplinary discussion about Montana's water future.

Join a diverse group of policy-makers, natural resource managers, scientists, water users, landowners, and community members for thought-provoking plenary sessions, a "Great Water Conversations" lunch, a panel discussion with former water policy legislators, innovative adaptation case studies, an interactive workshop, and dynamic presentations from visiting western water experts.

Seeking: "Great Water Conversations" Table Hosts

Are you looking to share your latest water-related project, initiative, or musing at the Montana Water Summit? This special topics lunch is the perfect opportunity to engage in specific conversation with other conference attendees. Maybe you'd like to ponder the finer points of groundwater dating or share your well-earned insights about water quality and beer...

We're looking for upward of 30 subject matter experts to host conversation tables at lunch on Tuesday, March 6. As a table host, you'll loosely guide an hour-long conversation based on your water-related expertise. Think of this as an atypical breakout session - over lunch!

If you'd like to host a table, please submit an abstract below. Summit attendees will choose a table from a variety of stellar topics and hosts, so be sure to make a good sales pitch! (Please note that hosting space is limited so we may not be able to accept all proposals).
